A. INTRODUCTION

1. The Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010 (A/CONF.191/11) was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Brussels on 20 May 2001. The programme aims to achieve substantial progress towards meeting the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) of halving extreme poverty by 2015 and of promoting sustainable development, thus resulting in improved human conditions for more than 600 million people in 49 least developed countries (LDCs). It provides the framework for a strong global partnership to accelerate sustained economic growth and sustainable development in LDCs; end marginalization by eradicating poverty, inequality and deprivation in these countries; and enable them to become constructively integrated into the global economy.
B. BACKGROUND

2. The seven specific commitments of the programme are as follows:

(a) fostering a people-centred policy framework;
(b) encouraging good governance at the national and international level;
(c) building human and institutional capacity;
(d) building productive capacity to make globalization work for LDCs;
(e) enhancing the role of trade in development;
(f) reducing vulnerability and protecting the environment; and
(g) mobilizing financial resources.

3. Cross-cutting priority issues have also been identified, such as poverty eradication, gender equality, employment, sustainable development, special problems of landlocked and small island LDCs, and challenges faced by LDCs affected by conflict.

4. IFAD’s strategic objectives have a common basis with those laid out in the Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries. Indeed, as stated in the Agreement Establishing IFAD, the Fund’s objective and functions “shall be to mobilize additional resources to be made available on concessional terms for agricultural development in developing Member States. In fulfilling this objective the Fund shall provide financing primarily for projects and programmes specifically designed to introduce, expand or improve food production systems and to strengthen related policies and institutions within the framework of national priorities and strategies, taking into consideration: the need to increase food production in the poorest food deficit countries; the potential for increasing food production in other developing countries; and the importance of improving the nutritional level of the poorest populations in developing countries and the conditions of their lives”. Thus many of the commitments made by LDCs and their development partners in the Brussels Programme of Action are already being efficiently pursued by the Fund through the Strategic Framework for IFAD 2002-2006. These serve the overarching goal of enabling the rural poor to overcome their poverty through the fostering of: social development; gender equity; income generation; improved nutritional status; environmental sustainability; mobilizing financial resources for development (including locally); broadening poor people’s access to financial and natural resources; fostering a people-centred policy framework; encouraging good governance at the national level through, inter alia, decentralization and devolution; and budgeting to achieve the MDGs.

5. The Brussels Programme of Action recognizes that the majority of the poor in most LDCs live in rural areas, depending on agriculture and related trade, services and processing activities for their livelihood. The only way to achieve a higher rate of growth in these countries is to engage the underutilized capacities of the poor through broadbased rural development centred on improved agricultural production. Increasing the sustainable productive capacity of agriculture and fisheries and the income of people working in these sectors is therefore a key priority for both the implementation and success of the Brussels Programme and the fulfilment of the Fund’s mandate. Within its first 25 years of operation, IFAD has, in fact, channelled 39% of its development aid to LDCs, comprising 46% of its project portfolio. In 2001, the Executive Board approved a total of USD 159 million in loans for LDCs, while in 2002, despite the slightly lower figure of USD 130 million due to an overall lower programme of work, the percentage of lending to LDCs was maintained.
6. As stated in IFAD’s Rural Poverty Report 2001, the most effective approach to reducing poverty levels is to focus on poor groups as agents of change, thus empowering the poor by creating the conditions that allow them to use their capacities more productively. Key elements in this process include allowing the poor to gain a stronger voice and influence in institutions that affect them, at both the local and national level, and promoting better access to health, education and economic services such as credit and savings.

7. The empowerment of the poor and their access to the material basis of production depend first and foremost on the people and governments of LDCs themselves. They need a policy orientation supportive of rural and agricultural development, with greater resources channelled to rural health, education and infrastructure, on the one hand, and to productive activities of the poor on the other, within a comprehensive development framework. The international community has an equal responsibility to offer stronger support to the efforts being made by LDCs.

8. The global campaign to achieve the MDGs, which, inter alia, address the needs of LDCs, has put the development of these countries high on the agenda of the United Nations. The success of the MDGs depends significantly on the success of the development efforts of LDCs. Progress with regard to the development indicators contained in the MDGs will move forward if LDCs do better in achieving those benchmarks. Thus the MDGs and the Brussels Programme are closely interlinked and mutually supportive.

C. PROPOSAL

9. IFAD therefore proposes that, in line with the General Assembly resolutions cited below, the Fund should join with other United Nations agencies, international financial institutions and multilateral organizations to mainstream implementation of the Brussels Programme of Action in their programmes of work and intergovernmental processes.

D. RECOMMENDATION

10. It is recommended that the Executive Board, taking into account the Brussels Declaration (A/CONF.191/12) and the Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries (A/CONF.191/11) for the decade 2001-2010 endorsed by the United Nations General Assembly in Resolution 55/279 of 12 July 2001, review the present document and its annexes and authorize IFAD to:

(a) continue giving special attention to LDCs in its programme and activities, and emphasize the effective implementation of the Brussels Programme within its mandate; and

(b) take careful account of the Brussels Programme of Action in formulating IFAD’s programme/activities and in its intergovernmental processes, as called for in the United Nations General Assembly Resolutions 56/227 of 24 December 2001 and 57/276 of 20 December 2002.
